

ILCG PRINCIPAL CONSULTANT

Madison Stump-Smith

Research, storytelling & learning design

Turning complex ideas and histories into meaningful learning, stronger engagement, and shared purpose.

Madison (Madi) Stump-Smith helps organizations use research and storytelling to strengthen learning, engagement, and social impact. Her background spans archival and environmental history, curriculum design, talent development, and higher-education engagement. Through ILCG, she turns complex histories and ideas into clear narratives and educational experiences. She brings an interdisciplinary perspective to projects connecting sport, learning, and community, making knowledge accessible and relevant.

AREAS OF EXPERTISE

- Archival & organizational research
- Public history & storytelling
- Curriculum & learning design
- Talent development & mentoring
- Community engagement

EDUCATION & CREDENTIALS

M.A., History
B.A., Environmental Policy and
Analysis, summa cum laude
Bowling Green State University

SELECTED PRIOR EXPERIENCE

Research & public storytelling

Researched environmental and community history, published archival work on university sustainability practices, and contributed to an interpretive trail project connecting people with place.

Higher-education engagement

Experience includes Honors College external engagement, university admissions, scholarship and fellowship mentoring, and teaching in history and college success.

HOW WE CAN SUPPORT YOUR WORK

- Research-grounded narratives and organizational history projects.
- Curricula, workshops, and learning resources tailored to the audience.
- Talent-development and community-engagement initiatives linking learning with purpose.

Discuss a project with ILCG

Connect with our team to explore scope and fit.

info@ilcgconsulting.com